

Ask Lindsay a Question?

Over here by the coffeemaker...

Do we have a coffeemaker?

Yes.

Is coffeemaker one or two words?

I think one because no red squiggly line appeared when I typed it.

Anyway, can I be the first to ask Lindsay a question?

Sure, Lindsay

Here goes:

Lindsay, I know the last two years have been stressful for you, but somehow you keep plugging forward, trying, trying, trying. It must be difficult. I'm impressed with your dedication.

Anyway, (perusing your site) you are pitching four books.

1. My Life on the Slush Pile.
2. Glue
3. A 60-Year-Old-Man Running in Flip Flops (Stories)
4. The Secret Life of [REDACTED] – Humanizing the Exploited.

Out of the four books, which one do you hope is published first, and why?

Curious George

Hi, Curious,

Hmm. I'd, of course, love if My Life... and its follow-up Glue are published first. But in all honesty, I'd be happy when any of the four are published (an inevitability).

Of course, My Life... and Glue go hand in hand.

May I switch gears for a moment?

I think it would be fantastic if The Secret Life of... was published first because it sheds light on the predatory practices of an unregulated industry that has been exploiting marginalized people for decades, unchecked. It is time for the roof to be blown off this industry. So, I'd love it if The Secret Life... comes out first!

(UNRELATED: Almost two years after being relieved of [REDACTED] duties, former employees are still contacting [REDACTED] – to ask for a reference. What does that tell you about the people running the company?)
